Governor race: Owens, Bangerter field questions on tax hikes, caucuses, party balance

By LAURA CHILDERS
Senior Reporter

Utah's two gubernatorial candidates batted as they brought their political differences to the forefront when they met in a debate Wednesday in the de Jong Center in Salt Lake City.

Republican Norman Bangerter and Democrat Wayne Owens fielded questions dealing with political balance, tax hikes and closed caucuses from a panel made up of two journalists and one BYU faculty member. Approximately 400 people were in attendance.

What would it do to prevent the Republicans from having closed caucuses in the state Legislature, Bangerter, who is speaker of the state House of Representatives, took the opportunity to counter a charge made recently by Owens that he has perfected the procedure in the House.

Soviet arms pact slighted, report says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's long-awaited report Wednesday that concludes the Soviet Union has displayed "selective disregard" for arms control agreements over the past decade.

The report found that Soviet practices related to about half of the arms control agreements during the period "show material breaches — violations, procedural violations or circumventions — of contractual obligations."

The report, prepared by the bipartisan General Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament, was requested by conservatives in Congress who charged the Soviets have violated existing arms treaties over the years.

Reagan, in a letter that accompanied a heavily censored unclassified version of the report, did not go so far as to request past allocations of Soviet strategic missiles and, in fact, even placed a disclaimer between him and the report by noting the document had not been reviewed by the administration.

"For our part," he said, "the committee continues to believe that we must concern ourselves with regard to compliance with arms control obligations and commitments."

We are actively pursuing several issues in confidential discussions with the Soviet Union and its allies on arms limitations, clarifications and corrective actions," Reagan said.

The report, a historical record covering the years 1958 to 1983, alleged the Soviets have breached or circumvented commitments as 17 nuclear and non-nuclear areas.

Many of the suspected violations were covered in a Jan. 25 presidential speech to Congress in which Reagan said: "Both sides must take serious note of the fact that 'increasing doubt' about Soviet credibility and 'damages the chances for establishing a more constructive U.S.-Soviet relationship.'

Astronauts to walk far above hurricane

Cape CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Ground crews uncertainly awaited Hurricane Josephine swirling far below them, the shuttle's shuttle crew prepared Wednesday for the first spacewalk Wednesday night to secure a loose antenna and practice refueling satellites. The pair will be attached to the shuttle by 10 a.m. Friday.

Kathy Sullivan and David Leestma planned to spend 3½ hours spacewalking in Challenger's open hatch to repair a loose antenna.

It may have been the last time they'll fly together.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Ground crews uncertainly awaited Hurricane Josephine swirling far below them, the shuttle's shuttle crew prepared Wednesday night to secure a loose antenna and practice refueling satellites. The pair will be attached to the shuttle by 10 a.m. Friday.

NASA officials decided to proceed with the mission as scheduled even though Josephine, packing 85 mph winds 435 miles east of the cape, continued to threaten Saturverted the closed caucus," Bangerter said. "Nothing could be further from the truth. I believe the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were both written behind closed doors. I believe everyone would concede that there are times when you need to hold closed caucuses."

Owens said although there are times when closed caucuses are necessary, the Republicans hold them to make policy decisions, which is inappropriate.

The Republican voted against a proposal that would have opened the meetings, Owens said, and while (Bangerter) didn't invent (the closed caucus), I think he has perpetuated them.

The Democratic hopeful called Bangerter's recent announcement that he would place a two-year moratorium on tax hikes "politically irresponsible. There is no way to predict what the revenue picture is going to be in January of 1986. That is an impossible task."

Owens has said he will not raise taxes for at least one year if he is elected. "What the speaker did Tuesday," he said, "was to see me one and raise me one."

"I think it is irresponsible to constantly take more and more out of the people's budget," Bangerter said. "It is the responsibility of every citizen to make some commitment to you, the people, that you can expect accountability in the income that you earn."

At one point in the debate representatives of the College Democrats and the College Republicans were given time to ask one question of the candidate from the opposite party.

A member of the College Republicans asked Owens how he could justify his pro-ERA stand knowing The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, of which he is a member, opposes it.

"The Equal Rights Amendment is 15 years old, and I supported it 15 years ago. It has not become a problem for me," he responded.

Owens added when LDS Church leaders called him to serve as a mission president for the church, they did not ask him to change his position on the matter.

"My commitment is long-standing, long before it ever became any kind of a controversy in this state or, I think, in this church."

The student further questioned Owens' opposition to a proposal, which will be on the ballot in November, that calls for the regulation of cable television in Utah.

He asked, "How often would justify his stand in light of an address concerning pornography given by Elder David B. Haight, a member of the LDS Council of Twelve, during LDS Church conference last weekend?"

The student further questioned Owens' opposition to a proposal, which will be on the ballot in November, that calls for the regulation of cable television in Utah.

LDS Church officials said Monday that Elder Haight does not appear to be in favor of the proposal.

"I am listening when Elder Haight spoke on that issue Sunday," Owens said. "I found no real disagreement with the thrust of what he was saying."

LDS Church officials said Monday that Elder Haight does not appear to be in favor of the proposal.

Owens said he had the problem in controlling pornography is not in regulating the airwaves, which is probably unconstitutional, but in what people allow to come into their homes.

"I have five children, and I am very concerned about pornography and obscene matter, and I will do everything constitutionally possible to close it down and shut it out," he said.

Rehearsals prime Bush and Ferraro Both candidates stage mock debates

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Vice President George Bush and Democratic challenger Geraldine Ferraro spent Wednesday cranking for their first and only debate, with Democrats saying a Ferraro win will show the Reagan administration is in trouble.

The Democrat's confidence heading into tonight's vice presidential clash comes on the heels of Mondale's strong showing against President Reagan in last Sunday's election.

The television networks agreed as many as 50 million Americans may watch the vice presidential clash, which will be broadcast live starting at 9 p.m. EDT.

Bush, 60, spent the day in his vice presidential office in downtown Washington, reading his black three-ring briefing notebook.

He planned a third mock debate with Rep. Jim Martin, 49, who is running for Ferraro.

"He thinks it is important for us to campaign for more important events in the overall campaign," spokesman Shirley Green said, adding Bush still believes the outcome will not make much difference in the voting for Reagan or Mondale.

"He will try to keep the focus on the top of the ticket" by attacking Mondale, Green said, adding that Ferraro has so far been delivering "unremittent attacks" on the president.

Ferraro, a member of the House who represents the Queens section of New York, spent all day Friday preparing for the debate, part of Saturday, and all day Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in television studios in Manhattan with Washington attorney Robert Barnett, a Mondale issues adviser standing in for Bush.

Ferraro, 49, looked at the video tapes of Bush's debate in the 1980 primaries and watched a playback of her performance against Barnett so she could see how she came across to television.

Campaign manager John Sasso was not available when Ferraro was asked how the two personalists might clash.

This is not a debate about personalities. This is a debate about how to run the country.

Polls show many voters remain unmovingly Ferraro, a relative newcomer to politics with six years in Congress, has the experience to be president if something happened to Mondale.

Bush's campaign has been experiencing a U.N. General Assembly session, CIA director and two terms in the House as making him well qualified for the top spot.

Bangerter's intended moratorium denounced

By STEVEN J. HANSEN

Governor Scott Matheson called Republican gubernatorial candidate Norman Bangerter's intended moratorium on tax hikes "sheer electioneering" and a "cheap Republican route."

The Utah governor denied Bangerter's assertion that the moratorium maneuver to can out votes. "It is sheer electioneering to come out and say categorically and unconditionally that there will be no tax increase," said Matheson.

"There is no tax increase," he said. "No public office is interested in raising taxes unless there is a public interest (to do so)."

Matheson made the statement during The Governor's News Conference, a program presented by a Salt Lake television station. The governor was responding to Bangerter's announcement he would not raise taxes for at least two years if elected governor.

"It would be appropriate for a candidate to say the $30 million surplus is adequate for the next year and that he would not raise taxes," Matheson said. However, the second year belongs to the "world of speculation."

Governor Matheson in Utah is like the nation's economy — it's schizophrenic," Matheson said. "No one can predict what the finances of a year will be, be said."

Also, Matheson said the Utah Legislature would be vastly improved if we could get more Democrats in," he said. "He said the need to elect more Democrats is essential to avoid a veto-proof Legislature.

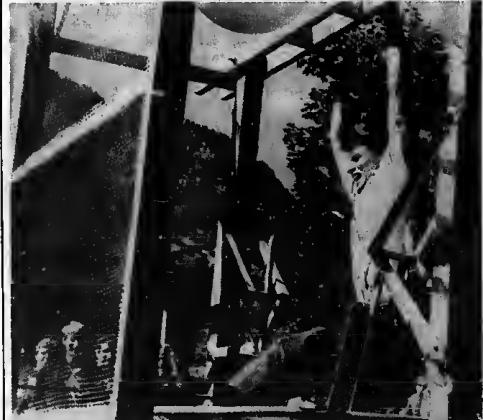

"The people of the state are not exercised as to who gets on the ballot," he said.

"They need to take the time to know the issues," he said.

In addition, Matheson discussed the "problems of integrating" single mothers into the work force. Some women are not interested in working because they have families and no breadwinner."

Matheson said the solution to the problem is day-care centers. Single mothers are less reluctant to return to work if day-care facilities are provided, he said.

"Our commitment has got to be to get women in good jobs so they can be self-sufficient."

Citizens want school removed

By BRENT A. BLANCHARD
University Staff Writer

Three spokesmen for a citizens group have asked the Provo Board of Education to remove the Provo Alternative Vocational School from its present location.

During the Board's meeting Tuesday night, the group of nearly 100 citizens packed the meeting room and charged the Board of Education with deception, overlooking the school's impact on the community and the students.

Alternative School budget and "poverty," along with dragging its feet in the search for a new school location.

Recent UBPA Evans said students attending the school have been involved in illegal possession of alcohol, tobacco and drugs.

They have also been accused in assault on school children, trespassing and destruction of property, according to the citizens group.

And one service technician involved in speeding up a school bus.

The controversy began in early September when residents complained about not being informed that the school would be opened in their neighborhood.

Provo High School, a residential school for children with emotional problems, read a prepared statement which expressed fear of the safety of children because the Timpanogos Mental Health Center's planned location is across the street from a residential street.

At the school, students are housed in dormitory-style buildings.

The board voted at last month's meeting to form a committee to investigate potential locations for the school. Assistant Superintendent Jim Bergera said the committee was named in mid-September. Since that time, the committee has met on three occasions and has reported on three sites.

Another neighborhood resident, John Chamberlain, said the group was no longer content with leaving the issue to be handled by administrators.

Citizen's group chairman, Charles C. Conner, was concerned that southeast Provo is becoming a "dumping ground for public facilities." A major issue was a perception that the school board made its decision based on convenience rather than cost.

The group also noted two additional health facilities, including an alcohol recovery center, a youth home and the state mental hospital, he said.

While the former industry official believes that houses are available in southeast Provo, Chamberlain said, "They deliberately lied" about the building's purpose. Citizens who asked about the building were never told about the school's function.

Rebel aid, water funds sticklers in funding bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 98th Congress Wednesday limped toward an uncertain final adjournment as the White House, Senate and House negotiators battled over aid to Nicaragua, gun control and whether to fund water projects.

Those twin issues were the main sticking point for a conference committee attempting to work out a compromise on a nearly $5 billion spending bill needed to keep the government running.

Negotiations from the decision to adjourn to send the White House some water projects and risk a veto, or take a House proposal to strip all money from the bill — including permission for $1.5 billion in new loans to Nicaragua — then hope the White House would accept a compromise on defense issues including a ban on arms for Nicaraguan rebels until Congress can deal with the issue.

Only one other issue delayed final adjournment — to raise the federal debt ceiling from $1.68 trillion to $1.82 trillion — and it too was bogged down in a dispute over unrelated tax amendments in the Senate.

The Treasury Department was forced to cancel a proposed $5.5 billion sale of seven-year notes because of the lack of a debt bill.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said if the debt limit could not be raised, he would attempt to pass a temporary spending bill — good for three weeks — to get through next year. Failing that, he said a lame duck session would be necessary beginning the week of Thanksgiving.

House and Senate members take a dim view of a lame duck session, and Senate Republican leader Howard Baker said the odds were "10-to-1" against one.

The House version of the outgoing 98th Congress grew gruff as they were about to go home to campaign for re-election to the 99th Congress. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., earlier in the day had called for a "no confidence" vote in the White House for indecision on the water project.

He noted that presidential aide James Baker had pushed for some projects while budget director David Stockman warned of a veto if any went in the bill.

last month's board meeting.

Board member Rod Crockett said he and Peterman had visited a former restaurant on 120 North the day before. The Alternative School Program director, who also accompanied him that day on a visit to Utah Tech College, had agreed to discuss sharing facilities with the school.

Crockett said he would be "shocked" if Peterman agreed with the movement rest by Bingham.

Board member Clark said he had "a little egg on our faces" because the board failed to inform the neighborhood before the school opened.

"We do feel a great urgency," he said. "To have time to make a decision, we had to wait and erupted with expressions of agreement when Robison said he thought the group wanted an answer indicating the school would close in two or three weeks."

Bingham said, "I would hate to see us... close down the school tomorrow and say, 'you can't go to school until we find a place for you to go.'"

When he would be pleased, he said. "If you could be with us for the opening of the school, that would be great," he said. "But I don't know if we will be able to open it down with cries of 'No!'"

Chamberlain said Wednesday that $223,000 of the Board's capital outlays (building budget two years) were set aside for the school. The program was removed to finance a teachers' career ladder program. Buckingham said he voted for the $300,000 "leeway" question two summers ago, but the school board did not act on it. School officials said there was a surplus of funds.

In a previous interview, a board of education official said several other projects, including a new year-round school and renovating Joaquin Miller High School, were more important priorities than building an alternative school.

Sharon Porter, clerk-treasurer for the board, said Wednesday that the board has never budgeted funds for an alternative school building.

U.S. supports Salvador talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador Presidential House where he met with Duarte.

In remarks to reporters waiting for Duarte to arrive at the Ambassador's residence, Shultz said his peace initiative was Duarte's own idea but hinted the U.S. Embassy had prior knowledge.

Shultz began his four-hour visit to San Salvador on Sunday evening. During his proposal to go unarmed to a rebel stronghold for talks Monday a bold and courageous bid to end the nation's civil war that has claimed more than 50,000 lives.

On his arrival at the Pacific-side airport, Shultz defused his own statement promising unilateral U.S. support to the Salvadorean leader's initiative to negotiate peace with leftist rebels.

Shultz began his four-hour visit to San Salvador on Sunday evening. During his proposal to go unarmed to a rebel stronghold for talks Monday a bold and courageous bid to end the nation's civil war that has claimed more than 50,000 lives.

"This is an act of great courage, taken in pursuit of peace," national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski said.

Shultz said Duarte's initiative has "our unilateral support," he and praised the Salvadorean leader for his "great preparation to take great risks."

"Although my heart is broken, this is a moment of great promise," Shultz said before departing for the rebel stronghold.

Shultz told reporters aboard his airplane that Duarte's initiative "is not only a bold step on his part but an astute political move." What he is seeking is what the people want.

If he succeeds, then I think he has accomplished something for his country. If it turns out the guerrillas don't want to do it in good faith or whatever, it's still worth a try," he said.

Shultz said Duarte was not interested in "power-sharing" talk but in "winning the leftists into the democratic process and ending the war that started in 1979."

Shultz said the direct talks underscore the objectives of the Contadora Process to bring peace and stability to Central America, being promoted by Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela.

"In a sense he is saying you don't have to wait around for some treaty to be signed in order to do this. Let's get on with it, let's have behavior. After all, it's behavior that counts," Shultz said.

LDS temple in Oregon gets approval

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (UPI) — The Lake Oswego Planning Commission has approved a conditional-use permit to allow the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to build the first temple in Oregon.

The permit, announced Monday, also must be secured by the city's Development Review Board, and City Council approval will not be needed unless action by the two panels is appealed.

The temple will be constructed near the intersection of Interstate 5 and Oregon 217 in Lake Oswego and will cost $12,000 of the estimated 80,000 Mormon church members in Oregon. It will not be open to the public.

Bike traffic regulation same as motor vehicle

By DEAN C. BARRY
Senior Reporter

Automobiles are not the only ones getting tickets nowadays at BYU, according to University Police Sgt. Greg Barber.

But, expect over traffic enforcement at BYU, said bike riders are expected to obey all laws that motor vehicles are subject to.

Recently, bike riders who have ridden their bicycles down the ramp near the Joseph Smith Building and the Smith Fieldhouse have received tickets. Barber said.

These signs posted at the top of the ramps that warn bicyclists not to ride down the ramp, he said.

Students who ride down the ramps take the risk of injuring not only themselves but also pedestrians, Barber said.

Recently, University Police tries to stay "on top of things" with regard to signs and regulations around the campus.

He said he remembers a student who was seriously injured when he rode his bike down the ramp and into the telephone booth. "I also remember when a skateboarder hit the dirt on the Smith Fieldhouse ramp, and was also seriously injured," he said.

Bike riders don't realize they can obtain speeds up to 35-40 miles per hour when riding down the ramp, he said.

Most bicyclists are not aware they are held to the same regulations as motor vehicles. Bicyclists must obey stop signs, yield to pedestrians and obey stop lights.

The fine for a bicyclist is only half of what a motorist would receive. Right now the ticket price for a bicycle is $7.50.

Barber said he encourages students to register their bicycles with the University Police with Provo City for theft purposes. The license costs $3.

"People with bicycles, if you get pulled over, we can enter the bike on the FBI's crime computer," he said.

Bicyclists are prohibited from riding down the ramp by the Joseph Smith Building. Students who ride down the ramp take the risk of injuring not only themselves but also pedestrians.

Crackdown starts on medical fraud

NEW YORK (UPI) — The federal government and the pharmaceutical industry are collaborating in a massive campaign to combat medical fraud which costs about $10 billion every year, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration said Tuesday.

"Health fraud robs consumers of their money and often the health of all those people are duped into buying a phony cure rather than seeking prompt medical treatment," Dr. Donald A. Young said at his first news conference as FDA head.

A campaign by the Pharmaceutical Advertising Council and the FDA is supported by the Council of Better Business Bureaus, the American Medical Association and the American Pharmaceutical Association.

"Medical fraud is a disease; it has been diagnosed," he said.

"But like other disease, it needs active patient involvement to prevent it or cure it. That's why must arm consumers with healthy skepticism."

The first phase of the drive is a public service ad campaign. About 500 television stations and 1,000 health care companies in the United States are invited to enter ads to alert the public about the dangers of health fraud.

"The three beat will be picked by a panel of Dr. Pepper, Dr. P. J. O'Neill, chairman of the House Rules Committee.

"The way to combat the problem of health fraud is through a massive advertising campaign," said Roger O'Neill.

Charges pending in burning of wife

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Prosecutors said Wednesday they will wait to see if a woman doused with gasoline and set afire before they file charges against her estranged husband.

Sharon Brandt, 37, a beautician, was in critical condition at a Milwaukee hospital with third-degree burns over 35 percent of her body. She was burned Monday night, and her chances of survival could not be determined.

The district attorney's office said Brandt's husband, whose name was not given, had accused her of breaking Wisconsin law, would not be charged until further evidence changed one way or the other.

Police said the man, 39, told them he had watched "The Burning Bed," a Monday night television movie about a battered wife who burned her husband to death, but they said she did not know if the movie prompted the man to kill his wife and set her on fire.

The husband was being held on $60,000 bail. In Wisconsin, bail can be set even though charges have not been filed.

Neighbors said they saw smoke rising building between two couple's houses after the husband left the house and Brandt began dating another man.

"It was like sitting on a powder keg waiting to go off and nothing helped," said Judy Grimaldi. "He was hurting so bad, he snapped."

Gerald Baade Sr., who said he was the husband's closest friend and got him a job three weeks ago, said the man was becoming more and more desperate to patch up the marriage.

"He kept hoping and praying that his wife would come back in but she kept leaving him," Baade said. "I think he wanted just to show her what he could do to her, to scare her. If she wouldn't be pretty anymore, he would have her. Then he would have her because he worshipped the ground she walks on."

Baade's 17-year-old son, Gerald Jr., said his father had been silent since his wife left him.

"I think he was trying to do with the 'television movie' because the husband had asked him for a five-gallon gasoline can hours before," Baade said. "He told the suspect he did not have one."

Padres' 5-3 victory evens series at 1-1

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Kurt Bevacqua, Tuesday night's goat for San Diego, became Wednesday night's hero by belting a three-run homer in the fifth inning to lift the San Diego Padres to a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers and the World Series at one game apiece.

After a travel day Thursday, the best-of-seven shifts will be Detroit for the third game Friday night, beginning at 8:30 p.m. PDT. Game four will be San Diego and Matt Wilcox for Detroit.

Bevacqua took the Padres out of a potentially big inning Tuesday night when he was thrown out trying to stretch a lead-off single into a double in the fourth inning. He atoned for his mistake by crushing an 0-1 pitch from lefthander Dan Petry over the fence in left following a one-out walk. Greg Nettles also had a single by Terry Kennedy off the shoulder of second baseman Lou Whitaker.

As he ran the bases, Bevacqua blew kisses to the crowd of 57,911 and the designated hitter was cheered with a standing ovation.

He only two hits over the last 2 1/3 innings. Hawkins took over for star Ed Whisen in the first after the Tigers scored three runs. He allowed just one hit over the next 5 1/3 innings while facing the minimum 16 batters.

Lefferts came on in the seventh and held the Tigers to one over the final three innings to earn the game for Hawkins.

Lefferts struck out five batters. Over the last 3 1/3 innings the Tigers did not get double-play grounders to Whitaker. But the ball took a bad hop on the hard infield and kicked off the right shoulder for a base hit. Bevacqua then hit an incoming home run off Petry.

The Tigers knocked Whitaker out in the first inning with a five-hit attack that produced three runs.

Whitaker hit the first pitch of the game for a single to center and Alan Trammell followed with a hit-and-run single to left that sent Whitaker to third. Gibbons scored on the first pitch to him, scoring Whitaker with the first run.

Gibbons stole second and Lance Parrish followed with a sacrifice fly that scored Trammell and sent Gibbons to third. Gibbons scored on the second hit of the inning when Evans singled over the head of shortstop Garry Templeton.

After Rupper Jones popped out, Johnny Grubb singled to left and Whitaker was replaced by Hawkins, who retired Chet Lemon on a grounder to third to end the inning.

The Padres got three runs in their half of the inning, all scored by Hawkins. With a walk to Tony Gwynn, a sacrifice fly hit by Steve Garvey and a sacrifice fly by Nettles.

San Diego added a run in the fourth to make it 5-2. Bevacqua led off with a single, took third on Temperton's one-out ground single and scored as Bobby Brown bounded into a force play. Wiggins followed with a single to right but Gwynn fielded the inning by flying out to right field.

Each fan was presented with a 4 x 6 American flag upon entering the stadium.

Oilers trade Campbell

Earl goes to New Orleans, reunites with Phillips

Houston (UPI) — The Houston Oilers Tuesday traded running back Earl Campbell to New Orleans for a third-round pick in the draft.

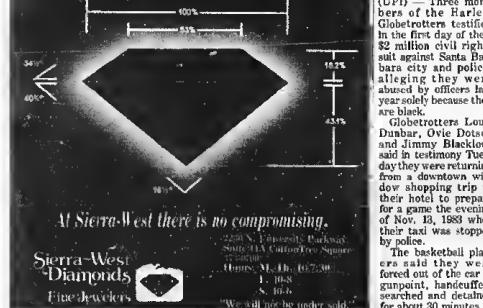

Campbell will thus return to his former coach, Bum Phillips, and leave a team that has faded dramatically since Phillips was dismissed four years ago.

There was no immediate comment from either Campbell or Oilers officials.

Campbell, winner of the Heisman Trophy in 1977 during his senior year at the University of Texas, is in his seventh National Football League season. In his early years with the Oilers, he got off to one of the best starts in NFL history.

He led the league in rushing his first three seasons with 1,450, 1,697 and 1,934 yards. But because of injury and lack of use, Campbell saw his statistics dwindle the past few years.

Netters will compete in Albuquerque

Oklahoma State. The netters go into the tournament 2-1 on the season.

Other teams include Texas Christian, Houston, Lamar, Arizona State, New Mexico State, and the combo of senior Leslie Craig and Hakala.

Brad Van Pelt goes to Raiders

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (UPI) — Linebacker Brad Van Pelt, who was a free agent this summer, has joined the New York Giants to the Minnesota Vikings last summer but wanted to play in California.

Florida graduate, who was traded to the Vikings in 1982, was traded again Tuesday.

Upperclassmen win 29-8

Juniors, seniors take first powderpuff victory

By MARGARET HAMMERLAND

University Sports Writer

Upperclassmen defeated lowerclassmen 29-8 in BYU's first annual powderpuff football game Wednesday night at Hava Field.

Most of BYU's variety football team coached the girls. Head coach of the lowerclassmen was Scott Norberg. Trevor Match coached the upperclassmen. Their athletic coaches included Steve Young, Leon White, Mark Allen and Blaine Fowler.

The upperclassmen scored on their first possession of the game. Leslie Simpson scored the first touchdown and had a half-minute left in the first quarter. Fullback Athens Kepas scored a two-point conversion, putting the upperclassmen ahead 2-0.

After another touchdown for the upperclassmen, the score was 14-0 at the end of the first quarter.

With a touchdown scored on a quarterback pass, the upperclassmen continued to add points to their score. Wide receiver Lisa Morales ran the ball into the endzone for the upperclassmen's second two-point conversion.

The lowerclassmen scored a touchdown on a quarterback keeper by Brett Peterson in the fourth quarter. Shauna Ames brought the score to 22-8 when she ran into the endzone.

Upperclassmen player Starrey Rodney scored the final touchdown of the game with six minutes remaining in the fourth quarter. Ellen Gooch scored the PAT, raising the final score to 29-8.

Though his team was defeated, Norberg said he still thought all the time and work that was put into the game was worth it.

"Let's do it again next year," he said.

Because of the example, Norberg said he learned more what it's like to be a coach.

"Now I know more where the coaches are coming from," he said. "I know how they feel when they're standing on the sidelines."

Unique halftime entertainment and original cheerleaders (men dressed in short skirts) added to the enthusiasm of the crowd.

Upperclassmen Coach Match said the most rewarding part of participating in powderpuff football was seeing it all materialize.

"Let's do it again next week," Match said.

Y harriers face big challenge

With two weeks of rest and national rankings to defend, the BYU men's and women's cross country teams will face seven Top 10 teams at the Wisconsin Cross Country Classic Friday and Saturday.

The Y's team, which finished first in the Fall Classic and second in the North Carolina Invitational, will face its toughest competition yet.

"The layoff will help us when you up against the best of competition," said Coach Sherrod James.

Ed Eyestone, BYU's top runner, will be going for his third consecutive win. He holds this year's record in the 8,000-meter run.

"I don't know who other schools will send, but if he runs like he did in the last meet, he is a contender," said James.

The Y's team will also be facing strong competition. The Cougars will line up against No. 1 Oregon, No. 2 Wisconsin, No. 7 Iowa State, No. 8 Florida-Gainesville, No. 10 Kent State and No. 11 Michigan.

This is the greatest field of women's cross country teams ever assembled outside of the national championships," said BYU coach Patrick Shaney. "We'd like to finish in the top five, but I don't think we'll end up any higher than third. Our second runner, Casey May, is still recovering from the Toronto Marathon, which means she won't be running Saturday.

All-Americans All-Holiday, Carey May, and Janel Burson will set the pace for the Cougar runners. Adding depth to the team is freehand standout Nancy Anderson.

The race will be run over the Yahara Hills Golf Course in Madison, Wis.

Perkins signs with Mavericks

DALLAS (UPI) — Sam Perkins, the All-America forward from North Carolina, has signed a five-year contract with the Dallas Mavericks, who picked him in the 1984 NBA draft.

"It's a comfortable agreement on both sides," Perkins said. He declined to give financial details of the contract. "Everything worked out. I'm glad I can begin practice. "I just have to find out Coach (Dick) Motta plus the team itself ... playing with several different guys," he said. "I just have to try to know them real quick."

Perkins sat out 10 days of practice because of a contract dispute.

Landry admits Cowboys not one of 'the big boys'

DALLAS (UPI) — Moments after the Dallas Cowboys were bumped off by St. Louis last Sunday, Coach Tom Landry said his team was going to have to play better if it wanted to hope to compete with "the big boys."

It was a somewhat painful thing for any member of the Cowboy organization to admit that Dallas is not one of the top teams of the NFL, he said.

"We haven't had a club like this in years," he said.

I think we'll be a good team in time," Landry added. "But we have never had so many changes in the team without having enough players to fill the spots."

Attorney gets parole after aiding escape of client-convict-lover

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Attorney Mark Evans got a parole for the first time for engineering the escape of his convict lover, was granted a Feb. 4 parole from prison Wednesday under condition she receive psychiatric help.

The 8-2 vote by the Tennessee Parole Board means Evans will serve less than 11 months of her three-year sentence for aiding and abetting William Timothy Kirk, 37, whose crime included the "execution" style killing of two convicts at Brushy Mountain State Prison.

"I regret it very much," said Evans, 28, who was on the run with Kirk for 189 days. "There's no doubt in my mind that it was a serious mistake."

Pictured during her trial as a schizophrenic who saw "demons" and looked on the muscular, bearded Kirk as her savior, Evans told the parole board she had given up on Evans and helped him escape because a psychologist's office because she was convinced he would not receive a fair trial.

"I felt tremendous pressure to do something and [legally] there was nothing I could do," she said. "Rather than commit a crime, I should have done everything I could do legally, and then my conscience would be clear."

"At the time I felt I knew what the case would turn out, and it wouldn't have been the right result," she said. "I participated in the plan, but I didn't know what would happen or do because I didn't know what to do."

Parole Board Chairman Nevin Trammell, who cast the deciding vote, after the board's two women members voted for parole, said he agreed because of Evans' psychological problems.

"I'm going to recommend parole with the proviso that you go to a boot camp and then have a checklist," Trammell told Evans. "This one is terribly difficult for me."

Evans was accompanied by her paralegal, Carol Bergstrom.

Evans told the board she regretted having caused her family and friends and agreed to have no further contact with Kirk.

She said she and Kirk committed no crimes while they were on the run.

Evans said she plans to live with her parents in Knoxville and do clerical work.

Her attorney said he doubted she would ever seek to regain her license to practice law.

Evans' lawyer Kirk's court-appointed attorney March 31, 1983, when she arranged for him to undergo a psychiatric examination in the Oak Ridge office of Dr. Roy E. Bergstrom.

The lawyer said he had helped him tie up two Brushy Mountain Pines on guard.

The pair then fled in their car.

Kirk later said he and his attorney had developed "a strong physical attraction."

The couple managed to elude authorities for 189 days until FBI agents caught up with them in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Evans was serving 14 years for his escape and another 10 for other crimes; she said she knew that she would be caught, but "wished that it had lasted longer."

Alpine AP program receives high marks

By TRACY KING
University Staff Writer

The Advanced Placement Program for the Alpine School District has received a state district board of education award Tuesday night in American Fork.

The AP Program is designed for students to accelerate past high school learning. Students who enroll and succeed in this program receive college credits toward the subjects they studied, explained Superintendent Carl Cox.

Many subjects are being offered to the students, including English, history, computer science, chemistry, biology, calculus, physics and art.

The number of students in those AP courses has increased significantly over the last year, said Dr. Camaron, presenter of the data studied. Last year, 11 students were in the AP course, whereas this year, 936 are participating in the program.

Of all the students who enroll in AP courses, 67 percent then have a high school or college credit, said Dr. Camaron. This means that one in every 11 students who graduate in the district have enrolled and succeeded in one or more college courses.

"We are very proud of the AP program we have in the district and hope many more students enroll and succeed in the various courses offered," said Dr. Richard A. Heaps, president of the board.

Superintendent Cox also reported on the administrative participation made available for the program.

The purpose for this program is to develop more trust throughout the district by improving communication between parents, teachers and students in the education program," said Cox.

The system that provides this communication involves different means for people to express their opinions in the classroom and the district.

One way to express opinions is by appearing before the Alpine Board of Education, which allows time for the public to address the board, said Cox.

The PTA also improves the communication between the school and the community through these groups to get together and discuss views of the school system, he said.

A cluster meeting that involves five principals and five teachers represents one of the ways the Alpine Board of Education can communicate more effectively.

"These are only some of the means to attempt more effective communication between people in the district. I think we are well on our way, but we still have improvements to make," said Cox.

to help the clients feel better about themselves. A strong spiritual base will also be emphasized to help them identify with higher forces in their lives. Finally, ways to reduce anxiety, other than taking pills or drinking alcohol, will be taught he said.

A multi-disciplinary team of psychiatrists, medical doctors, psychologists, speech therapists, substance dependency counselors, exercise specialists, recreation therapists, spiritual leaders and communications people will be working to make this program the best for the client's needs, Bergstrom said.

Many people not in the local area are served by the UVRMC. "We really aren't a local hospital anymore. We treat many people coming up from Southern Utah," said Dr. Eugene Buckner, director of the Chemical Dependency Program at UVRMC.

The treatment center is located in the newly remodeled area of the UVRMC. "The setting is comfortable and intimate with residential-style rooms and furnishings," said Buckner. "The areas has limited access and affords complete privacy from other parts of the medical center."

The treatment of patients begins with an evaluation and assessment, followed by a psychological assessment. The program continues with therapeutic rehabilitation, family counseling, transitional care from the center to the community and after-care follow up, said Buckner.

Y alumni come home to reunions

For BYU alumni, Homecoming is a time when memories come to life. "Coming home" means catching up with across campus, cheering at the football game and meeting former classmates and friends at reunions.

A number of reunions are scheduled as part of the Homecoming activities, which will last through Saturday. Most of the reunions will be Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Wilkinson Center, with Virginia Riggs, alumna class of 1955, as on-campus coordinator.

Various classes and organizations will have reunions, including a 50-year reunion for the classes of 1933 through 1928; a 40-year reunion for classes from 1943 through 1942; and a 25-year reunion for the class of 1959, she said. "One of our activities during the weekend is to assist alumnae in organizing reunions," said Riggs.

Reagan rebuts attack on his age, health

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan accused "desperate" opponents Wednesday of stretching for an issue by injecting age into the campaign, and said he would have looked younger than he does with as much makeup" as Walter Mondale.

The 73-year-old Reagan was questioned about the issue in a brief session with reporters as he left for a campaign swing in the Detroit suburbs.

As the day wore on, the president and his campaign appeared to be in an all-out effort to reduce age and health issues that cropped up after the debate Sunday night, when Reagan appeared to tire, occasionally stumbling and apparently losing track of his sentence.

As for whether he thinks the age issue is important, Reagan said: "No, I don't. I think this time it shows, again, the same kind of desperate reaching out for something that they did before."

Dr. Daniel Ruge, the White House physician, pronounced Reagan's health as "excellent."

Reagan told a 1980 interview that he would instruct his doctor, in tests during his presidency, to take into account the possibility that he would become senile.

In an interview with The New York Times on June 11, 1980, Reagan said: "If I were president and had any feelings at all that my capabilities had been reduced before a second term came, I would walk away."

'Cats' to dance in Marriott Center during Homecoming Spectacular

By MARNI BELL
University Staff Writer

Cats will be purring through the Marriott Center during the Homecoming Spectacular Friday and Saturday nights.

The Dancers' Company, directed by Pat Debenham, will perform "Jellicle Cats" from the Broadway musical "Cats."

The musical is based on T.S. Eliot's poems "Cats."

According to Debenham, the musical is still being performed on Broadway so the rights for it are very tight. "It's like a copyright," said Debenham. "A road company can only obtain the rights to perform the whole show after many years."

BYU obtained the rights to perform the piece "Jellicle Cats" by writing to the copyright holder director.

Since the whole show is on cats, the audience should look for cat-like qualities.

"Cats have that sense of calculation in their movements and apparently they have that postpone ability to change directions quickly," said Debenham.

The 28 dancers will take on the challenge of being a whole different kind of character instead of just doing a human dance.

Debenham said the dancers will have to ask themselves the questions: "How does a cat look out of his eyes? How does he stretch his head? How does he move his head?"

"I feel it is important for our dancers to be able to do more than one style of dance. Performing 'Jellicle Cats' will allow our dancers to stretch themselves in the theatrical area," said Debenham.

The costuming, under the direction of Maureen

Winterton, will be similar to the ones on Broadway. The dancers will be dressed in unitards or leotards and tights with added fur and tails for the cat look.

Jane Sander and her makeup class will do the faces of the characters.

The University Singers will accompany the dancers.

Randall Beethie, director of Homecoming Spectacular, said the theme of Homecoming Spectacular is "The World Is Our Campus." "Jellicle Cats" will represent one of the diverse styles of the world of dancing.

Beethie said BYU will try to be one of the first groups to perform the whole musical in the future.

The dancers will also be performing "Very Vividly" (choreographed to a Vivaldi concerto) and "Shake It 'Til You Break It" (take off the 50s).

Val Brinkerhoff applies colors to his photographs to create a multi-image art form known as diptych. A selection of his photographs is on display in Gallery 303, HFAC, through Oct. 30.

Photographer uses diptych to capture Rock Springs

By LAUREN A. MACHEK
University Staff Writer

The personality of a small community in the southwestern desert area of Wyoming can be seen this month in Gallery 303, HFAC.

Photographer Val Brinkerhoff will exhibit the use of diptychs through Oct. 30 in his one-man show, "Rock Springs, Wyoming and Its People."

Brinkerhoff makes use of the diptych, defined as a pair of related images joined to form a single image.

"Artists have been using the diptych to uniquely express themselves since the pre-Renaissance times," he said. "By joining or placing two images next to each other, the artist can compare and experience existing within each work," said Brinkerhoff.

The diptych is not a new art form, according to Brinkerhoff, but it can serve as a useful tool to create a multitude of relationships between images and onlookers. The diptych gives the artist more freedom to express a clearer theme with greater interpretive freedom, he said.

In his display, 13 diptychs or 26 images are exhibited. Brinkerhoff's photographs of the city of Rock Springs and contrasts it visually and intellectually.

According to Brinkerhoff, "Objects exist together in unusual relationships. Order thrives in disorder, and life springs from cold inanimate things. History, politics, economics, families and other creeds all reflect forms of humanity."

In each photograph, Brinkerhoff colors each image, black and white print, with a life-existing midpoint between the two images.

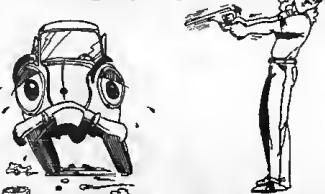

Brinkerhoff's show is traveling between exhibits in the Intermountain West until 1985.

He is a photography instructor at Western Wyoming College in Rock Springs and earned a bachelor of arts degree from BYU in 1980. He is working on a master of fine arts degree at Utah State University.

During the summer, Brinkerhoff plans to conduct two coloring workshops, one at the Victor School in Victor, Colo., and another at Western Wyoming College.

Gallery 303 is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Theater has highs, lows but the shows still go on

By LAUREN A. MACHEK
University Staff Writer

Although theater in America is unpredictable and moves in cycles, it will not die with a lull or a pronouncement.

In a recent BYU lecture, Bernard Jacobs, president of the Shubert Organization Inc., said that despite contraction and expansion of theater, because of changes in the economy, innovation and play acceptance, theater tends to move from "highs" to "lows" said Jacobs.

In 1963 theater was at a low. Conflict arose between the profit and non-profit nature as they struggled for survival. "In the '70s," Jacobs said, "its rebirth came with a barrage of successful comedies like 'Fiddler on the Roof' and 'Hello Dolly.'

The rebirth did not last long. According to Jacobs, "the '80s experienced yet another loss of vitality in theater." In the '80s, theater is in decline with the cycle. It boomed again as "A Chorus Line" opened in 1975 on Broadway. Despite claims that "the day of the long running musical are over," "A Chorus Line" is still running today.

At this time passed, new ticket selling strategies as well as marketing policies were devised. Organizations to perpetuate the arts were created.

In 1975 the Shubert Organization Inc. was founded. Jacobs and his wife, Carol, a former dancer, moved to theater and danced to it "a business."

By analyzing the mechanics of theater, they devised effective selling tools and focused on attractions. The success of theatrical ventures had to be clear and had an enormous impact on traditional theater and projected profits.

Theater moved from small houses to larger capacity houses to increase audiences in order to perform more exciting and full-production plays and musicals.

Though ticket prices rose with inflation during the '70s, Jacobs said they should not be compared on price. "Theater has become more complicated in spectacle and design," he said. Jacobs believes improving the quality of theater will have a stronger impact on the audience.

Presently, the Shubert Organization is the largest organization of its kind. Besides owning many theaters from Los Angeles to New York, it operates the most sophisticated ticket reply system in the world.

Hypnotherapy may enable children to fight acute pain

NEW YORK (UPI) — A pediatrician who specializes in behavioral problems says hypnotherapy is being used to reduce or eliminate children's pain from an acute injury or chronic illness.

Dr. Karen Olness talked about hypnotherapy at the recent annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics. In addition to reports on gifted children and encyclopedic studies, also hold special interest for parents.

Olness, director of research and behavioral pediatrics at Minneapolis Children's Health Center, said trained medical practitioners can use hypnotherapy to help children cope with overuse injuries, after chemotherapy and pain associated with burns, fractures, migraine headache, infections or spinal taps.

"Considerable clinical experience has been published confirming that children learn to apply hypnotherapeutic methods more readily than adults and show more rapid clinical improvement than adults," she said.

Olness thinks this is because kids have fewer inhibitions.

She distinguished between hypnosis and hypnotism.

"Hypnosis is an altered state of consciousness," she said. "Hypnotherapy is a treatment modality in which the practitioner induces hypnosis, at least part of the time."

The pediatrician, who also is associate professor at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, and a member of hypnotherapy persists because many practicing it aren't medically trained.

Y graduate honored Foundation appoints Rhodesian

By JAY RUYBAUD

University Staff Writer

A 1958 BYU graduate from Rhodesia, Africa, has recently been appointed to the International Board of Advisors of the Templeton Foundation.

John G. Kinner was appointed to the Bahamas-based organization that annually awards a $25,000 prize for progress in religion. The award goes to living people who make outstanding contributions to understanding and love of God.

Kinner is the Public Programs Director of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, responsible for communications reaching non-church members worldwide.

"We are delighted to have Mr. Kinner as a newly appointed member of our board of advisers and welcome him as he joins those distinguished men who work in all nations and faiths who serve in helping the Templeton Foundation," said foundation Vice President Wilbert Foraker.

"As a skilled communicator and world traveler, he will be a great asset to us."

Kinner is the first LDS church member to serve on the board of advisers since the foundation's philosophy of "... avoiding attempts to syncretize diverse religions, but rather to bring recognition to new ways of thinking of God that have increased in various contexts." He was appointed to a five-year term.

Kinner has been a member of the LDS Church's World Committee Department for the past 10 years and is serving in the church's missionary department.

From his church appointment, Kinner served as director of University Programs at BYU where he established the first self-funded tour for the Program Bureau and the American and Dutch delegations.

While Kinner served in that position, the bureau's international television exposure increased from nearly 2 million viewers in 1972 to more than 27 million in 1974-75.

In his current position, he has served as executive producer on such programs as "The Krueger Report," "Meet the Mormons," "The Story of the Americas," "Jimmy Carter," and "Meet the Mormons" film. In various languages.

Political Month talk to center on freedom

A prominent businessman, politician and member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be today's Political Month speaker.

George Romney, a former governor, U.S. cabinet secretary, and LDS regional representative, will speak on the topic "Corporations and Politics" at 7 p.m. in the JSB Auditorium.

According to Ty Kershaw, editor of the ASBYU Activities Guide, Romney had held many important offices during his career, including president of American Motors, chairman of Michigan from 1963 to 1969, secretary of Housing and Urban Development under Presidents Nixon, and chairman of the National Center for Voluntary Action.

Romney was also a regional representative for the LDS Church from 1973 to 1980.

JOHN G. KINNER

He also supervises the production of the church's service to radio and television, communiques and various print advertising efforts. He is responsible for general conference broadcasts and "Music and the Spoken Word," radio and television and radio distribution, and church choir publications.

He was recently assigned the additional responsibility for pageants, visitor centers and exhibits worldwide.

The Templeton Foundation prize is now given annually to scholars from the United Nations Headquarters in New York and awarded by Prince Philip in May in London's Guild Hall.

Previous recipients of the award include Dr. Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the noted author who defected from Russia; Dr. Billy Graham; Dr. Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan, former president of India; and Oxford professor of Eastern religions and ethics; Professor Thomas F. Torrance, theology professor at the University of Edinburgh, recently elected to the Order of Merit; and others.

He is interested in relationships between science and religion.

A panel of eight judges are selected to decide upon the recipient of the award.

Other recipients are Dr. Mrs. Anwar el-Sadat, the Royal Highnesses Josephine of Luxembourg, Dr. Noor Khan, and Dr. Zafarullah Khan of Pakistan, former president of the International Court of Justice at Haag.

He wanted to know if the jurors thought reporters were "Generally honest," "Never honest" or "Sometimes honest" in discussing government officials. He also asked if they had no opinion.

He never expected to appear in a hearing about the coverage of CBS news and documentary programs, if press criticism of government officials is good, and was the press generally fair in reporting

Jury selection delays trial in libel suit against CBS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gov. William Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit trial against CBS for slandering him about enemy troop strength in Vietnam got bogged down in jury challenges Wednesday.

Lawyers on both sides slowed the selection of six alternates in the second day of the landmark trial, originally set for Oct. 10, three months, delaying opening arguments.

Both of the major public figures in the case were in U.S. District Court in Manhattan Wednesday. Westmoreland, a conservative Democrat, and his wife, Alice, are suing the network over its top-rated dramedy potboiler, "The Sixties."

Also in court was CBS Correspondent Mike Wallace, who narrated the 1982 CBS documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception."

Westmoreland, 70, claims he was libeled by the program, which accused him of playing down the number of American troops killed in President Lyndon Johnson and the nation's the progress of the war shortly before the communists' 1968 Tet offensive.

The 70-year-old general, who commanded U.S. forces during the initial escalation of the war between 1964 and 1968, denies any deception and said CBS held him up to "scorn, contempt and ridicule."

Also present was CBS Producer George Crile, whose documentary, former CIA analyst Samuel Adams, a consultant on the program, was absent from court.

The 12 regular jurors were selected Tuesday, but were too young to have had combat fighting in Vietnam and young enough to know of the war only by hearsay and history books.

One Navy veteran said active in World War II would not stop him from being a fair juror, that he was not biased because he had no strong bias against the media." He was excused.

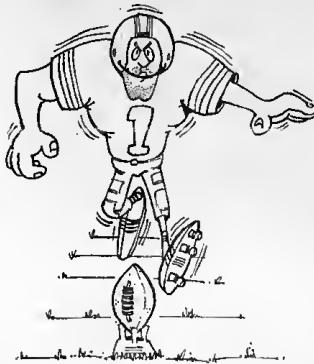

None of the six men and six women selected Tuesday to hear the $120 million libel case have close relatives in the military or in Southeast Asia.

Level asked the prospective jurors a series of 40 general questions, then wound up with five specific ones.

He wanted to know if the jurors thought reporters were "Generally honest," "Never honest" or "Sometimes honest" in discussing government officials. He also asked if they had no opinion.

He never expected to appear in a hearing about the coverage of CBS news and documentary programs, if press criticism of government officials is good, and was the press generally fair in reporting

Planetarium president attacks commissioners

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — If at first you don't succeed, try, try again, they say, and Hansen Planetarium Foundation President Cliff White is trying again to persuade people the County Commissioners did a bad thing.

White has criticized the County Commission constantly since commissioners became embroiled in a controversy with Planetarium director Mark Littmann who resigned last year.

White, a staunch Littmann supporter who helped create the private planetarium four years ago as a fan favorite in the country's largest stadium, even led an unsuccessful attempt to dump County Commission Chairman Mike Stewart in his reelection bid at the Salt Lake County Republicans' Convention last spring.

Now the Hansen Planetarium Foundation has released the findings of a questionnaire distributed to members of the Friends of the Hansen Planetarium, which White says are still disturbed by the departure of Littmann.

"We think the responses of these proven supporters of the planetarium provide a clue to what the community as a whole thinks about the Hansen Planetarium," said White.

Of those who responded to the questionnaire, 65 percent said they had seen three star programs at the planetarium each year in the past, but 45 percent said they had not attended in the last six months.

Littmann's leaving the planetarium after 17 years as its director sparked the most comments among the questionnaire respondents, with 73 percent saying they were greatly distressed by Dr. Littmann's resignation, said White.

White said the Salt Lake City government is doing a poor or very poor job of operating the Hansen Planetarium. Sixty-one percent felt the planetarium could operate more efficiently by a private agency through a management contract. The county has pretty much severed relations with the foundation, and the Salt Lake City Attorney General's Office said he will pursue charges against the Hansen Planetarium Foundation's name. But Lt. Gov. David Monson told Can-

Animal Science breakfast planned for 'early birds'

For the 15th year in a row, the Animal Science Department will sponsor the Alumni Early-Bird Breakfast on Saturday as part of the Homecoming weekend activities.

The 6:30 a.m. event at the Ellsworth Meat and Produce Company (220 N. University Avenue) is open to graduates, faculty, administration, students and others interested in Animal Sci-

Besides a complete breakfast, there will be displays on the department's latest research and projects, student-guided tours of the center and a showing of prime animals.

Fall Colors

Lucius said the other day that the autumn leaves looked more brilliant to her than those of prior years and I think she's right. I was just talking to my Uncle Paul Simmons and he said the same thing. So it's a consensus. Perhaps the leaves are looking more brilliant because of the year and dry weather now. Paul said that the area around Hope Campground on the Squaw Park Trail was breathtaking. The traffic in Provo Canyon was so heavy yesterday that we went up Spanish Fork Canyon instead and it took us longer.

It's easy to get good pictures of such a beautiful subject but it takes concentration to get great ones. This might be the year for once in a lifetime masterpiece. The most spectacular autumnal masterpieces are usually those taken concentrically on one side or on just a few leaves. The mighty vista at the head of Rock Canyon on the Squaw Park Trail is an exception, it really photographs well.

The leaves that are in their peak right now are the bright red maples. They are a little hard to photograph because they are generally on steep slopes and are often hidden behind trees. The bright yellow aspens are coming on. The last leaves to turn are the cottonwoods. Cottonwoods are in the bottoms of the canyons near streams. They are the trees the most likely to produce great photos. Years ago Dean Ostrom found a state of some cottonwood in the bottom of a little canyon that was the prettiest fall picture I have ever seen.

Cottonwood trees have leaves at all levels, including the part of the tree right near the ground. The tiny yellow leaves (stems and branch) of the best examples of cottonwood trees will be made with the light coming through the leaf. Yellow leaves are sufficiently translucent that more light comes through the leaf than is reflected back. If you are driving along and you see some beautiful yellow leaves take a look at that. You may catch your eye isn't lost if you stop a distance from where you first noticed the leaves. The technique used for this kind of subject is called backlighting. You actually shoot toward the sun.

If you have a zoom lens try some of your pictures with the telephoto range of your zoom. We saw a gorgeous hillside up Faville Canyon a while back and to our surprise the wide angle pictures of the whole hillside were not as good as the close-up shots. I think the best autumnal picture I ever got was of one single aspen leaf, partly crushed by a grasshopper. Come and visit me sometime and let me see some of your autumn leaf masterpieces. Isn't this a great place to be in the fall?

Academy Square looks to community for help

If members of the Provo City Council seem to be suffering from a case of "smoke gets in your eyes," it is because of a huge smoke screen originating with the owners of the Academy Square.

The owners are calling for the Provo community to save the Academy. But that is not where the responsibility lies even though the community and BYU students should be vitally concerned about saving this valuable historic site. It is the owners who have the moral duty to keep the Academy alive and not demolish it in the so-called name of progress.

UNIVERSE OPINION

The land was purchased in 1975 under an agreement the land would not be sold unless the land was worth more without the buildings than with them. The land is currently worth less than the buildings.

The Academy was granted a lease on life in 1979, after the original owners had planned to turn the square into a shopping center similar to Trolley Square in Salt Lake City.

The new owners planned to begin renovation within weeks of the new purchase. "These are not big buildings. They're a wreck right now inside and out, but after we're through, they'll be a landmark for Provo," said Martin Bouton, president of JMB Construction, the company in charge of the 1979 project.

The 1979 plan called for 80 percent of the Square to be used as office space, with the rest being used for a restaurant, specialty shop, a gymnasium and a theater. The Academy enjoyed some attraction for a few years, but once again it is clinging to the end of its rope. A new owner saved it last time, but Provo may not be so lucky this time around.

Now, the owners are blaming the Provo City Council for the Academy's situation, because the council voted not to locate a new library in the square. Owners have passed the buck to the Provo City Council and Friends to Save the Academy, when the responsibility to save the building should be with them.

Owners of the Academy ought to look to the community's support, but should not feel the responsibility to pass blame on others for the possible destruction of Academy Square.

The fate of the Academy Square lies primarily with the owners. But the community and BYU students as well should fight to preserve some of our historic past and stand up to efforts to cover Utah Valley with modern shopping centers.

If the citizens of Provo are interested in saving the Academy, then it will be saved. They will rally behind the Academy with vocal, physical and monetary support.

If the owners are sincere in their efforts to save the buildings, they will rally behind the historical efforts and not try to shift blame to the City Council or the community.

If the Academy is saved, it can be through the efforts of the city's people and the owners of the buildings. We are hopeful as well as confident that there are enough residents and students who recognize the value of historical buildings such as those at the Academy who will do all they can to preserve this important part of our heritage.

Lack of tradition

Homecoming is as traditional to the fall season as psychedelic leaves and football. But, like the leaves, maybe the tradition is looking ragged around the edges.

Homecoming originated as an opportunity for alumni to revisit the old stomping grounds, to renew acquaintances and watch a football game. But the spirit of the alumnae rise and shout, those of many students may have lost.

Homecoming in high school was a spasm. Most everyone participated in the daily pep assemblies, bonfires, and formal dance. The football teams became more excited for Homecoming. "We can't lose a Homecoming game," they all agreed.

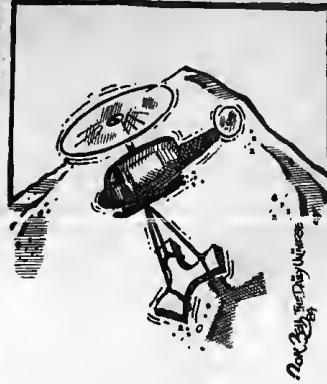

But it's a little difficult to pass the Homecoming spirit in to 26,000-plus BYU students, some whom, a few die-hard students still do, but the main ones don't work. Homecoming spirit.

ASBYU activities committee organized a myriad of Homecoming activities for students to catch the spirit — a powderpuff football game, pep rally, informal and formal dances, and a lecture series by distinguished alumni. Even so, students seem more involved in the mid-term and the World Series. A few of the clubs are about the only ones participating. But somehow the excitement and energy that came from the mid-term selection has died. Maybe it's just a bad case of the mid-term blues and blues. Or maybe Homecoming has become as obsolete as the ancient tradition of climbing the mountain to paint the "Y."

Sure, everyone plans to take part in the fun and games and go to the game, but not because it is Homecoming but because it is the thing to do. But what else in there to do in Provo on a game day?

"But Homecoming is tradition," you say. "It is tradition," we may argue. Yet, need we continue an out-dated tradition? Just for custom's sake. If most students do not care, why continue?

Perhaps the vote of the loyal few will continue to justify Homecoming's hallowed but questionable existence. After all, Homecoming makes for a fine, full frolic, a pleasant parade, a divine dance and the biggest bonfire of the fall.

Body bobbing: the latest BYU sport

Have you driven around campus lately and noticed the obstacle course drivers have to go through? It seems there are obstacles on every road that can wedge their way between cars and other moving vehicles. It's those things you are adding a new sport and activity on campus.

Human body bobbing has become one of the favorite pastimes on campus. They believe all traffic must stop when they are ready to cross the road.

Those who come to campus from a syndrome syndrome. They believe they have certain privileges on campus. They believe all traffic must stop when they are ready to cross the road. When they see the sign, they get in. If one does not wait but challenges these beings, the driver is considered rude, a reckless driver, inhuman, and obnoxious.

But what is a driver supposed to do? For he too has choices to make and still faces the fight for the road. He doesn't have time to waste on them.

The law is on his side, and posted signs blatantly blind (they don't see the flashing yellow light indicating to proceed with caution).

Those who are for this behavior in they have choices to get to and don't have time to be alert for moving vehicles. They claim they have to jog a mile to get from one class to the next. Also, that's the driver's responsibility to be alert for them. Even way when there is a sign with a flashing yellow light, they still insist on driving through it off those syndrome-driven individuals.

Why? If one comes across one to avoid him for a minute will surely follow.

While they are slowly making their way across the road, they are not the only vehicle as if doing their best to get in. If one does not wait but challenges these beings, the driver is considered rude, a reckless driver, inhuman, and obnoxious.

But what is a driver supposed to do? For he too has choices to make and still faces the fight for the road. He doesn't have time to waste on them.

The law is on his side, and posted signs blatantly blind (they don't see the flashing yellow light indicating to proceed with caution).

Now don't think this just started recently. The battle has been going on ever since vehicles made their way onto campus. But since the beginning, it's been a long battle for the motorist.

Ramps have been built, tunnels constructed, and traffic lights installed, but the motorist doesn't stand a chance against these stubborn beings bent on crossing the road when they want to. They will not wait for the first ramp to go down. They could last as stubborn and refuse to stop. But then they will hit someone and probably be sued. Their license will be revoked. They'll be listed as reckless and inconsiderate drivers on a much-needed-imperative sticker which will undoubtedly affect their reputation for life, not to mention their social life at BYU will automatically be killed on the spot. After all, who will want to get into a car with a homicidal mind?

Obviously the system on campus is not working. So what should be done? Well for starters, how about issuing tickets to these syndrome-struck individuals? That would be a good idea. Enforcing the law by not adhering to the sign. Or perhaps they could be made to log all the ramps on campus several hundred times to remind them why they were created. And if nothing of the sort, then just speed ahead on motorized vehicles for fun and it's every man, woman, and child for himself.

A remedy suggested for errant doctor bills

The jargon and muddle of medical bills is taking its toll on those who pay the bills — mostly insurance companies.

Parry Mason, a reported in 1981 that 98 percent of all medical bills correctly audited revealed sizable errors. A hospital bill auditing firm averaged $25,392 each, and after they were studied and resubmitted, each was reduced by an average of $1,254, or 4.9 percent.

Hospital bills probably aren't cheating, they're just cringe. The manager of Equifax Services Inc., the auditing firm, attributes mistakes to the lack of clear directions of the insurance companies for drug charges from lab tests and X-rays that are ordered and later canceled, but never charged.

Some mistakes they found are simple data entry errors. The press of a wrong key can increase a charge from $50 to $500 in a split second.

Extra costs paid by insurance companies mean an extra, and insurance rates will go up. Eventually, patients themselves pay for the superfluous costs of the errors.

It's wrong in billing areas, why aren't the patients to blame? One problem is with the patients who are running up the bills for insurance companies to pay don't know what to look for in the bills to see if they are written accurately.

Hospital bills are filled with professional jargon and long, stringy medical terms. The forms are often filled with abbreviations that the patient is not familiar with.

Insurance companies don't always have time to go over each bill or in individual charges. They do, however, that cause a major headache for the consumer is generally satisfied.

Insurance companies don't always have time to go over each bill or in individual charges. They do, however, that cause a major headache for the consumer is generally satisfied.

Hospitals probably will continue to make mistakes, and it would be difficult to eliminate all of the errors.

The more general solution is communication between those who write the bills and those for whom they are written. If there is a problem with a bill, they are obligated to work with patient to make sure they understand for what they are paying.

For example, if a patient goes to an insurance agent, hospitals need to take time to go over the forms with patients, attributing each cost.

If there are mistakes, they can be found, most could be easily fixed, and insurance rates could cease to rise.

Patients have the responsibility to look at the bill before they receive it to make sure it is correct. And they should look at more than the total figure at a glance. Why consumers will demand an itemized list of all costs incurred, and they can't just accept what the hospital says. They will still ask one who knows. Without these precautions being taken, insurance rates can't help but rise higher and higher.

Liberal defender

Editor:

I enjoyed Bistro's editorial sounded me like a defense of the liberal wing of the Democratic party. It is true that government should not be involved in the establishment of religion, but that doesn't mean that religious leaders should not be involved in government.

Pierce attacked those who accuse Gerald Ford of being pro-abortion by suggesting that he was pro-abortion but pro-choice. For me to say that I am personally opposed to abortion but that I believe that others should be allowed to make their own decision is analogous to my saying that I am personally opposed to war but that I believe that others should be allowed to make their own decision.
